New snow, light-moderate wind

Date
Tue, 02/06/2024 - 13:00
Activity
Snowmobiling

We rode over Lulu Pass and around Fisher Peak into Abundance drainage. There was 8” of new snow that fell since Saturday, up to 12” north of Daisy. Wind was light to moderate and could see snow transport at peaks and ridgelines. Snowed most of the day with some heavy pulses, and some periods of decent visibilty.

Light was flat, but didn’t see any slab avalanches today while riding. I just spotted one small slab from town with binos on the east face of Mineral. There were a couple very small loose slides off the highest ridge of Henderson.

Region
Cooke City
Location (from list)
Lulu Pass
Observer Name
Alex Marienthal