

Centennials: poor stability

Activity

Snowmobiling

I haven't gotten a chance to write up my observations from the Centennial's last Saturday but with this storm that's occurring down there I thought it was important to reach out and let you know what I saw. The melt freeze crust from a few weeks ago and the rain crust from earlier in the season are still very present in the snow pack. There is about a 2 inch slab on top of the newest melt freeze crust that fractured on isolation. Should be a sporty couple days down in the centennials.
