Snowmobiling

As we were leaving the zone, loose snow naturally flushed out of the steep north /east facing couloirs / cliffs NW of Ainger Lake, fell over some cliffs, and triggered additional dry loose and what appeared to be some small storm slab pockets, out onto the apron.

Viz was not great re: details, but it was a humbling amount of snow moving on its own, without any obvious signs of warming or wind transport. No other yellow flags observed throughout the tour.
